Cheap Hotels & Flights: The number of travellers that are using the Internet to find the cheapest deal to go on holidays is increasing each year. But it became seemingly more difficult to find Cheap Hotels compared to Cheap Flights. Especially in Europe and the USA where cheap airfares with low cost airlines and very cheap last minute deals make it easy for a large number of holidaymakers and business travellers to hop on a plane for a short city break, a weekend trip or a quick beach holiday. Whilst airlines have taken price cuts into account to in order to stay competitive accommodation and in particular hotels did not experience a price drop to such an extent. The demand for cheap accommodation is higher than ever since more travellers can afford to go and visit a city or chill for a 1 week or two in a beach resort villa. Hotels in Paris, Rome, Venice, Naples, Barcelona, Amsterdam, Prague etc. vary enormously in price between winter low and summer high season when hotel owners adjusting their tariffs to supply and demand. Hotels in Lisbon, Madrid, Budapest and Krakow have been upgrading their facilities but kept their prices rather modest to gain a competitive advantage.

Prague Hotels

Not so long ago there were only two types of Hotels in Prague that any visitor could choose from. First class luxury hotels and truly low budget short-time hotels. It took Prague's hotel owners some time to realize that not everyone who is visiting Prague is either super rich or a travelling homeless person with absolutely no money or expectations. Now there are a few good mid-range hotels in Prague that offer affordable accommodation to the average visitor coming to the city. However that many visitors from Australia and the USA still have about eastern Europe that everything is very cheap and that lots of good and cheap hotels in Prague are to be found easily, maybe warned. No, unfortunately the answer is there aren't that many cheap hotels in Prague and those mid-range once are all new and adapted quickly their rates to the western European standards. As they did in quality.
